

I'm writing to you from India where I am meeting with courageous girls and young women who are working to end child marriage in their communities.

I am in awe of how they are joining together to define their own futures, on their own terms.

Today—International Women's Day—I'm especially delighted to share AJWS's new animated video about ending child marriage in India, the country with the highest number of child brides in the world.

Together we're supporting girls in India to live with the dignity, safety and independence they deserve.

To celebrate International Women's Day, please share our new video on Facebook and Twitter.

Thank you for joining with AJWS to build a world in which girls can shape their own destinies.
