This link is to the audio and transcript of an interview I did for the nationally-syndicated radio show CounterSpin in which I note, pronouncements by the mainstream media and some presidential candidates notwithstanding, there was NOT a consensus that Iraq had "weapons of mass destruction" at the time of the 2003 U.S. invasion, that Hillary Clinton and other members of Congress knew they were voting for war, and the invasion would have been illegal and unnecessary even if Iraq indeed did have WMDs: <http://fair.org/home/the-sense-that-everybody-thought-they-had-wmds-is-a-total-fantasy/>

I was on this press release regarding Marco Rubio's lies about the Iraq War: <http://www.accuracy.org/release/48475/>

In this one on Hillary Clinton's lies about the Iraq War: <http://www.accuracy.org/release/clinton-still-falsifying-on-iraq-war-vote/>

And in this one on Donald Trump actually telling the truth about it: <http://www.accuracy.org/release/trump-right-on-911-and-iraq-war/>

This link is to a 35-minute interview I did for the "Arab Voices" radio show on a Houston public radio station about Hillary Clinton's Middle East policy. My segment starts at the 20-minute mark: http://www.arabvoices.net/archives/kpft_160224_190000av.mp3

This column by Russ Wellen for FPIF on how women in the Global South have been disproportionate victims of Hillary Clinton's foreign policy quotes extensively from a recent article of mine: <http://fpif.org/women-high-list-victims-hillary-clintons-hawkish-foreign-policy/>

And here's a link to a six-minute segment of an interview I did for Black Agenda Radio on the dangerous implications of Hillary Clinton's foreign policies should she become president. My segment starts a little after the 31-minute mark: <http://prn.fm/black-agenda-radio-02-22-16/>
