

Subject: World History/Science & the Environment

posted Wed Mar 22, which links the Native American struggle to protect the land and the water here in the U.S. to the Mayan struggle (and our struggle!). Included in the article is a 3 min. video:

"The defense of water knows no borders, according to the Mayan Ancestral Authorities, the communal authorities and elders of Mayan towns across Guatemala. This reality has led the Mayan leaders to work in solidarity with the Lakota Sioux as they challenge the construction of the Dakota Access pipeline." -- In Defense of Land and Water, From Standing Rock to Guatemala

Lesson;

Where else are there environmental protests? Do you know of similar ones in other places?

Are they related to Climate Change? How

Have you ever joined one? Tell about it> How did it make you feel? Were you with people from many backgrounds?

Is this a global concern?
