

As we begin a new school year here in Brookline, Massachusetts, and in many locations around the world - and for those of us in places where school is well underway - we are all joined in our shared awareness of and concern over the difficult events of the last few months. Young people enter their classrooms each day with so much to understand. Whether you're an educator, student, parent, or friend of Facing History, we hope to support you and learn from you as you seek ways to bring context to these conversations.

Below you will find a selection of recent posts and news from Facing History. Please share your comments on our blogs, and connect with us on Twitter and Facebook, so we can hear from you.

We look forward to a year of learning and partnership,

Photo by Tom Kates

Facing History and Ourselves

Michael Brown: How to Create a Safe and Reflective Classroom Environment

New Facing History eBook Explores Holocaust in German-Occupied Soviet Territory

5 Resources for Meaningful Student Engagement

What Can “To Kill a Mockingbird” Teach Us About Ourselves?

Back to School: 4 Top EdTech Trends to Watch

Skill vs. Intuition: The Art and Practice of Note-Taking

Five Ways to Create a Safe Classroom Space

New Ways to Support Facing History

Your vote can help Facing History win \$100,000 in Los Angeles

Join our new community, Facing History Together

Amazon donates a portion of your purchases to Facing History

Recent News

New York Times Learning Network Features Facing History Among Best Practices for Bringing Ferguson into the Classroom

Teaching Tolerance Spotlights Facing History Among Resources for Educators Teaching about Ferguson

New York Teacher Reflects on Impact of Facing History Summer Seminar

Facing History London School Hosts First Annual EdTechTeam Summit

Polish Facing History Educator Starts Landmark Program to Train Polish Law Enforcement

16 Hurd Road, Brookline, MA 02445

facinghistory.org